OTHER INFORMATION
The major contributors to the perfuming ingredients of rose oil are rose ketones and rose oxide.

The major contributors to the perfuming ingredients of rose oil are rose ketones and rose oxide. Rose ketones are the precursors of many important flavors and fragrances and being used in the creation of new type perfumes.

If the light pouring through stained glass windows, dancing in vibrant red and orange and flickering on the skin, had a scent, it would be the fragrance of damascones, aroma materials derived from the...
beta-DAMASCENONE

Bulgarian rose oil (rosa damascena). Encompassing rosy and fruity aspects, damascones have a vibrant and potent scent, marked by woody and tobacco like qualities, depending on the type. Some derivatives of damascones have very interesting nuances, from green apple, stewed plums and ripe figs to nuts and woods. First isolated between 1970 and 1980, damascones and damascenons produced a true breakthrough given their fascinating olfactory profile and intense fragrance.
